Racism

SEAN SIMPSON
Vice President, Ipsos Public Affairs
April, 2019
Methodology

- These are findings of an Ipsos poll conducted on behalf of Global News.
- For this survey, a sample of 1,002 Canadians from the Ipsos I-Say panel was interviewed from April 8\textsuperscript{th}-10\textsuperscript{th}, 2019.
- Quotas and weighting were employed to ensure that the sample’s composition reflects the overall population according to census information.
- The precision of online polls is measured using a credibility interval. In this case, the results are accurate to within +/- 3.5 percentage points, 19 times out of 20, of what the results would have been had all Canadian adults been polled.
- Credibility intervals are wider among subsets of the population.
Almost half of Canadians (47%) think racism is a serious problem Canada is facing today.
  • This perception has declined drastically (-22pts) since 1992 (69%).

Personal experiences of racism have increased in recent years (+6 pts since 2005).
  • 1 in 4 Canadians have been victims (23%).

Muslims continue to be seen as the most likely targets of racism (59%).
  • Over a quarter of Canadians (26%) believe it has become more acceptable to be prejudiced against Muslims/Arabs.

More Canadians now perceive blacks to be likely victims of racism (+8pts since 2017), making them the second most likely target.
  • Yet, only 1 in 10 Canadians believe it has become more acceptable to discriminate against blacks.

Visible Minorities in Canada more likely (58% vs. 48% White) to think racist thoughts they wouldn’t publicly express.
  • More likely (32% vs. 21% White) to think it is normal to be prejudiced against different races.
Racism in Canada Today

Almost half of Canadians think racism is a serious problem in Canada today; females (54%) and residents of Saskatchewan and Manitoba (57%) are more likely to feel this way.
Perception of Racism in Canada Over Time

- Though the perception of racism as a serious problem in Canada has declined drastically in the past 27 years (down 22 points), it has been more stable since 2017 (-1pt).

Q1. How serious a problem do you consider racism to be in Canada today? Base: (n=1,002)
Acceptance of Neighbors of Other Races

- While over 8 in 10 Canadians agree that they would welcome a neighbor of a different race, there has been a decrease in acceptability in the past 14 years (-7 pts since 2005).

- However, in the past 2 years, tolerance has risen slightly (+3 pts since 2017).

- One in ten (11%) Canadians is uncomfortable with a neighbour of another race.
