Bill C-24 is a law that aims to strip dual citizens of their Canadian passports if they are convicted of crimes of terrorism, treason or espionage against Canada, or take up arms against Canada. This has been specifically debated in the case of Canadian nationals who have fought with ISIS in Syria and wish to return to Canada. Some people say "A Canadian is a Canadian is a Canadian", and that Canada should do what it can to bring Canadian nationals home to Canada, even if they've been fighting for ISIS. Other people say that we should "not lift a finger" to help bring these Canadians back to Canada. Which of these positions is closer to your point of view?
