

Government surveillance of mobile phone roaming data

How strongly, if at all, would you support or oppose mobile phone service providers giving the Government people's mobile phone roaming data for each of the following reasons?

Base: 1,069 Online British adults 18-75, 10-13 April 2020

Government surveillance of mobile phone roaming data

How strongly, if at all, would you support or oppose mobile phone service providers giving the Government people's mobile phone roaming data for each of the following reasons?

% Support

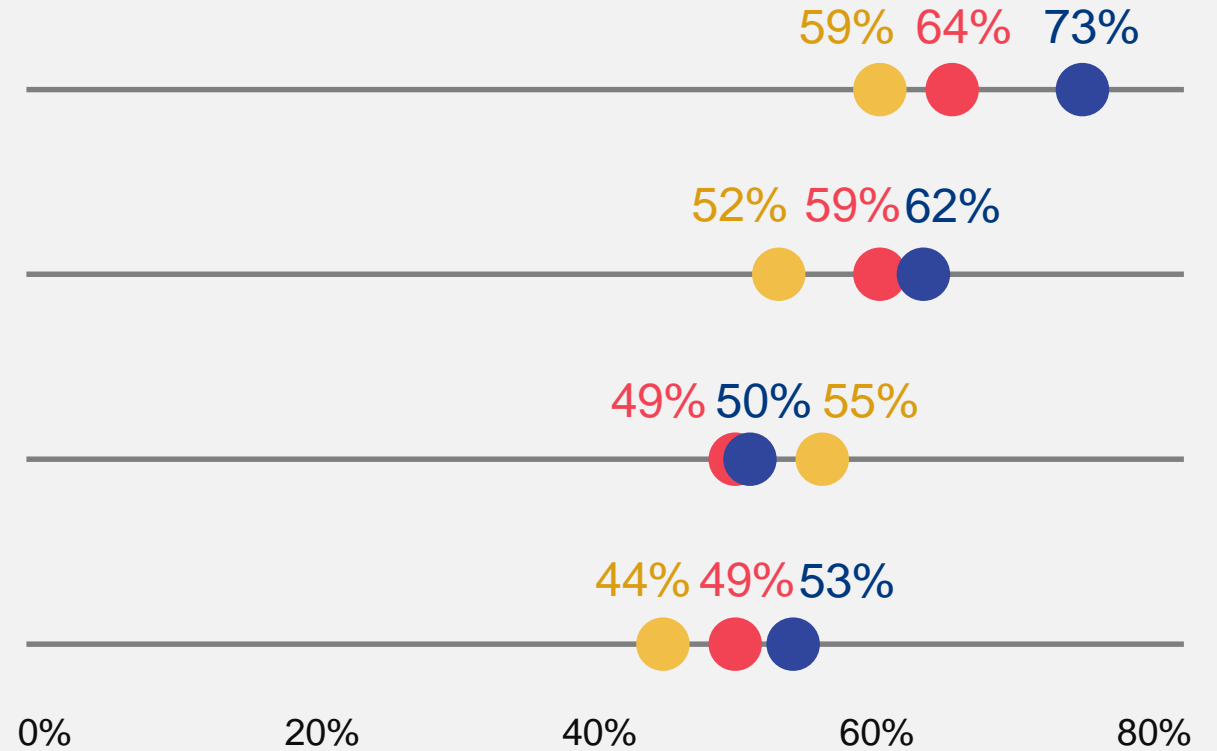

● 18-34 year olds ● 35-54 year olds ● 55-75 year olds

So the government can track people who have been diagnosed with the Coronavirus, and those they have come into close contact with, so they can advise those individuals to self-isolate themselves"

So the Government can find out if the public as a whole are following social distancing and lockdown rules that are in place and decide if more rules are needed

So the Government can find out how many British citizens are currently abroad, and where they are, so that it can help bring them home

So the Government can find out if individual people are following social distancing and lockdown rules and penalise or fine those who do not follow them

Base: 1,069 Online British adults 18-75, 18-34 year-olds (352), 35-54 (392), 55-75 (325), 10-13 April 2020