Reuters/Ipsos Poll: Midterm Enthusiasm and COVID-19 Sentiment

Topline Findings

Washington, DC, February 15, 2022 – A recent Reuters/Ipsos poll finds that only one-quarter (25%) of Americans believe the country is headed in the right direction. Thirty-six percent of Americans believe the COVID-19 pandemic is heading in the right direction, and ultimately 45% approve of President Biden's performance in office. Half of Americans (51%) say they are entirely certain they will vote in this November's upcoming election, with 41% saying they strongly agree with the statement: I will regret if I don't vote in the upcoming congressional election.

Americans are generally split on the important factor/issue when deciding who to vote for – 22% want a candidate who can restore trust in government, 21% want a candidate who is strong on the economy, and 17% want someone who has a plan to tackle COVID. Americans are evenly split on which party's candidate would have a better plan for the economy (38% Democratic candidate, 39% Republican). More Americans believe Democrats are stronger on COVID-19 (42% Democratic candidate, 32% Republican candidate), and they are split on who can restore trust in government (36% Democratic candidate, and 33% Republican candidate).

Nearly half (47%) of Democrats believe that Democrats have been unable to get things done because Republicans are blocking their efforts, 25% think Democrats accomplished most of their objectives in 2021. On the other side, 46% of Republicans say Democrats have been too busy fighting amongst themselves, and 33% say they have been unwilling to push things through.

Two-thirds of Americans (64%) report that COVID-19 is a very real threat to our society, while 36% say we need to get back to our lives. Seventy-one percent of Americans report being concerned about COVID-19 with Democrats more likely to say they are concerned about the virus because of concerns over their family's well-being (31%) compared to 16% who are concerned about the economic impact. In comparison, 19% of Republicans are concerned about their families' well-being, while 30% are concerned about economic disruption.

PUBLIC POLL FINDINGS AND METHODOLOGY

About the Study

These are some of the findings of an Ipsos poll conducted between January 31 and February 7, 2022 on behalf of Thomson Reuters. For this survey, a sample of 4,404 adults age 18+ from the continental U.S., Alaska, and Hawaii was interviewed online in English. The sample includes 2,015 Democrats, 1,663 Republicans, and 510 Independents.

The sample was randomly drawn from Ipsos' online panel, partner online panel sources, and "river sampling" and does not rely on a population frame in the traditional sense. Ipsos uses fixed sample targets, unique to each study, in drawing a sample. After a sample has been obtained from the Ipsos panel, Ipsos calibrates respondent characteristics to be representative of the U.S. Population using standard procedures such as raking-ratio adjustments. The source of these population targets is U.S. Census 2018 American Community Survey data. The sample drawn for this study reflects fixed sample targets on demographics. Posthoc weights were made to the population characteristics on gender, age, race/ethnicity, region, and education.

Statistical margins of error are not applicable to online non-probability polls. All sample surveys and polls may be subject to other sources of error, including but not limited to coverage error and measurement error. Where figures do not sum to 100, this is due to the effects of rounding. The precision of Ipsos online polls is measured using a credibility interval. In this case, the poll has a credibility interval of plus or minus 1.8 percentage points for all respondents. Ipsos calculates a design effect (DEFF) for each study based on the variation of the weights, following the formula of Kish (1965). This study had a credibility interval adjusted for design effect of the following (n=4,404, DEFF=1.5, adjusted Confidence Interval=+/- 3.3 percentage points).

The poll also has a credibility interval of plus or minus 2.7 percentage points for Democrats, plus or minus 2.9 percentage points for Republicans, and plus or minus 5.3 percentage points for Independents.
