Do you or someone you know currently have a Personal Support Worker (PSW)? PSWs typically help individuals with daily living activities, such as hygiene, meals, and mobility, and work as part of patient care teams. They work in a variety of environments, be it in long-term care homes, hospitals, or in-home care. They may also use job titles such as Social Worker, Health Care Aide, Patient Care Aide, Resident Care Aide.

We are hearing that sometimes the cost of homecare leads Canadians to make cuts in other areas of their budget. In-home care from a PSW can range from $19 to $75 an hour ($150 - $600 per eight-hour workday). With inflation the way it is, if you needed to make a budget cut to afford a personal care worker, which aspect of your finances would you sacrifice?
