

Key findings

64%

across 32 countries say if individuals don't act, they will be failing future generations. Since 2021 all countries have seen the proportion that agree fall.

74%

are concerned about the impacts of climate change in their country. Compared to 2022, when we last asked this question, 18 of the 27 countries surveyed have seen an increase in concern.

53%

think passing a 1.5°C increase in average global temperatures is a big deal.

44%

think transitioning to renewable energy will lead to an increase in household energy prices. This sentiment is higher in European countries.

My country should do more in the fight against climate change. % agree

APEC

66%

Europe

54%

LATAM

72%

North America

52%