Around 1 in 4 say they know at least a fair amount about the Chancellor's fiscal rules, but most only know little or nothing about them

How much, if anything, do you personally know about the Chancellor's "fiscal rules"? Please say if you don't know or have never heard of them.

Base: 1,079 Online British adults aged 18-75, including (332)18-34-year-olds, (403) 35-54s, (344) 55-75s, (335) 2024 Labour voters, (151) 2024 Conservative voters, (101) 2024 Reform UK voters, and (99) 2024 Liberal Democrat voters, 25 - 28 April 2025

Around one in four can correctly identify each of the Chancellor's three fiscal rules. One in three say they don't know, while a similar proportion misidentify closing the £22bn "black hole".

Which of the following, if any, do you think are included in the Chancellor's fiscal rules? Please select all that apply.

Incorrect answer

Correct answer

Few think the Chancellor breaking her fiscal rules would be a good thing, although views are more positive if it improves public services

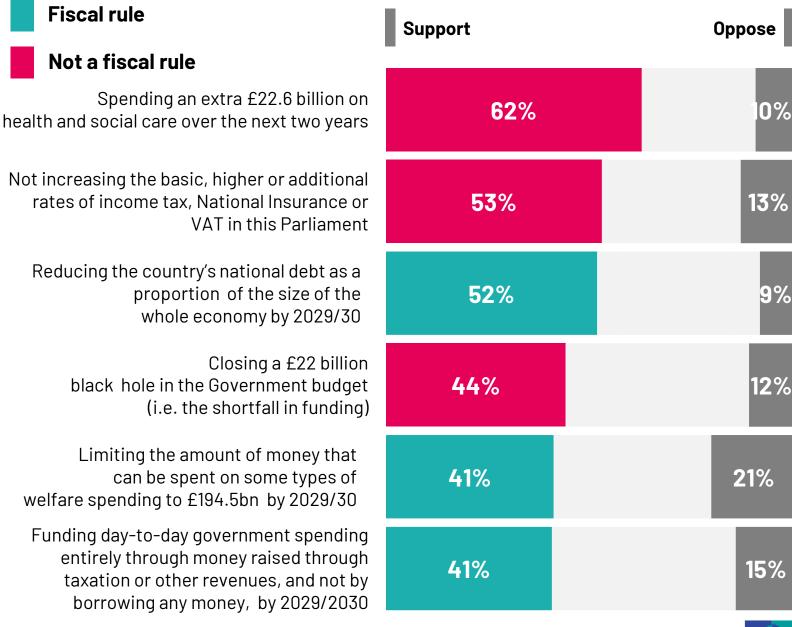

Do you think it would be a good or bad thing, if either, if the Chancellor, Rachel Reeves broke her fiscal rules...?

On balance more support than oppose the fiscal rules (especially reducing the country's debt), but there is even more support for spending more on health and not increasing taxes

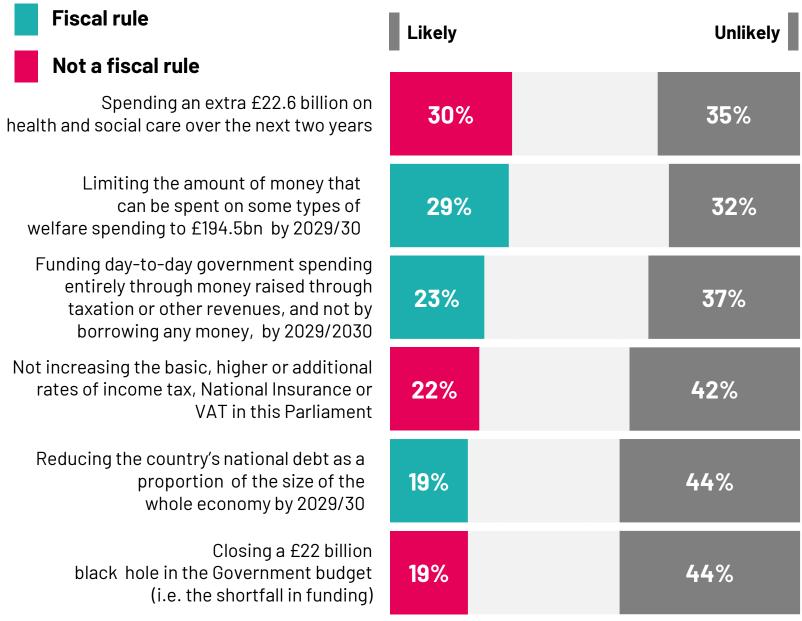

To what extent, if either, do you support or oppose the current Labour government committing to achieve each of the following?

Around two in five think it's unlikely the Chancellor will meet her fiscal rules to reduce the country's debt or fund day-to-day spending through entirely through taxation

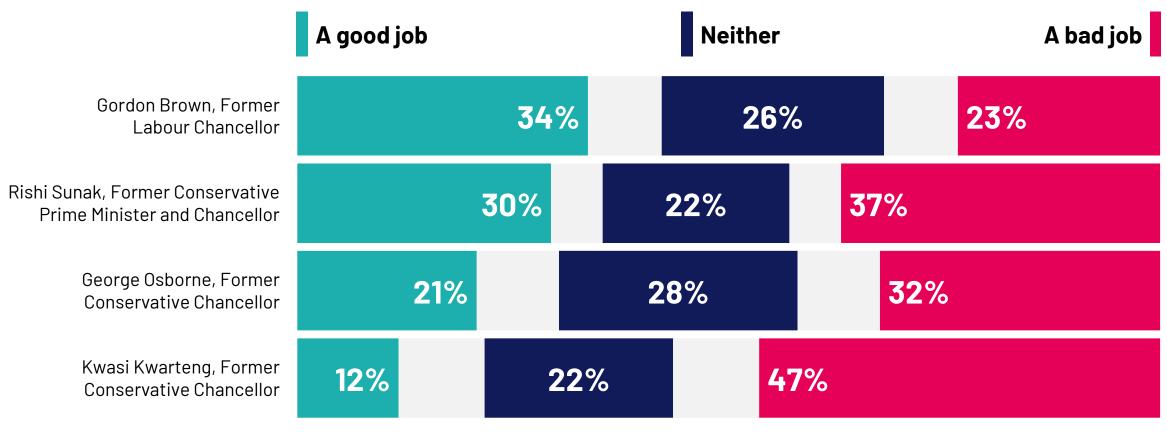

And how likely or unlikely, if either, do you think it is that the current Labour government will achieve each of the following?

The public are largely divided over the performance of the recent Chancellors, however, almost half think Kwasi Kwarteng did a bad job

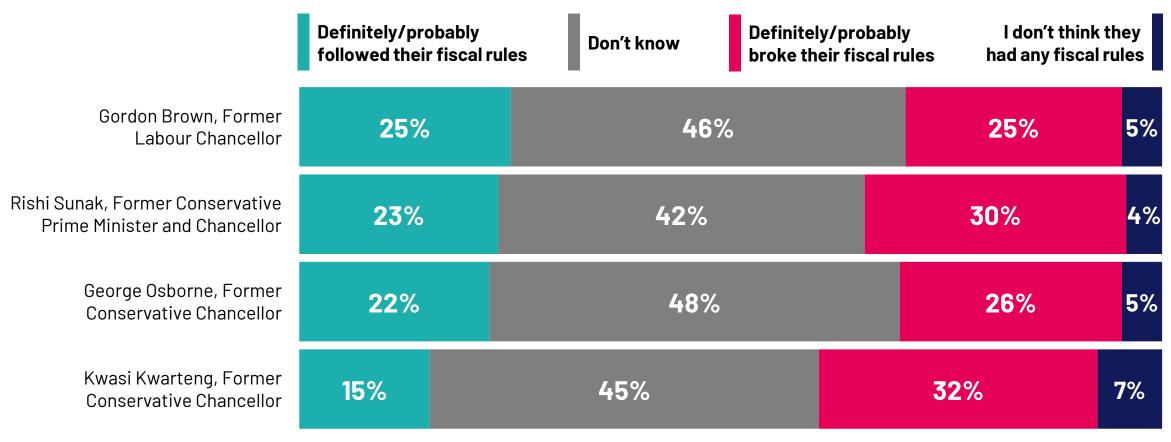

To what extent, if either, do you think each of the following did a good or bad job as Chancellor of the Exchequer?

Around half say they don't know whether recent Chancellors followed or broke their fiscal rules, despite different views on their performance

To the best of your knowledge, did the following recent Chancellors follow or break their own fiscal rules?
