Global @dvisor: Panama Papers

Q2_2. [This story shows that there's two sets of rules in the world - one for rich people, and one for everybody else.] The media has reported about several rich people and politicians avoiding taxes in their home countries by setting up shell companies and offshore accounts with a law firm in Panama. This story is being called "The Panama Papers." Please tell me if you agree

It's completely reasonable to avoid taxes however you can, including putting money in shell companies and offshore accounts. This story shows that there's two sets of rules in the world - one for rich people, and one for everybody else. If a politician from my country is proven to have done what is alleged in the Panama Papers, he or she should immediately resign their position.	2756	1585	1171	1404	838	514	701	913	826	1282	1473	720	1073	963	1670	1085	563	2193	843	1913	1975	762
