"The 'Somalia Inquiry' has been looking into charges of misconduct by Canadian armed forces in Somalia as well as other problems in the Canadian military. Some people have said that, in light of these issues, the Chief of Defence Staff, General Jean Boyle, should resign his position. Other people do not think General Boyle should resign because the government remains confident that he is the best person to deal with the problems raised at the Somalia Inquiry. Based on whatever you've seen or heard about this, do you yourself think General Boyle should or should not resign as Canada's Chief of Defence Staff?"
