I fear that cloning human beings will be used wrongly by people who only want to create a master race?

I think that cloning human beings for such things as replacement body parts, transplants and experimenting with new drugs, if carefully regulated is not a bad thing.

“Some people say that individuals should be screened before they are permitted to be cloned and that only the very smartest people in the best physical condition should be cloned.

Other people say that screening who gets cloned is wrong and that cloning should be a random process that does not exclude anyone.

Which is closest to your own point of view?

“Putting aside that you may or may not be in favour of cloning, let’s assume that the cloning of human beings is a reality and that you have been put in charge of overseeing the process. What attributes, qualities or physical characteristics would be most important to you in determining who gets cloned?”
