

I'm now going to read you some statements about last week's terrorist attacks and the United States' declaration of war on terrorism. For each one, I'd like you to tell me if you strongly agree, somewhat agree, somewhat disagree, or strongly disagree. The first one is: We should join the United States and also declare war on international terrorism.

Would you still be prepared to join the war if you knew that it could expose civilians in Canada to attack by terrorists?

The next one is... I would be prepared to see our police and security services get more power to fight terrorism, even if it means that they might tap my phone, open my mail or read my personal e-mail.

The next one is... I believe there are international terrorists within Canada who are just waiting to attack Canadian civilians.

The next one is... I think we are headed for a NUCLEAR war as a result of the events of last week and the war on terrorism.

And, would you say that you approve or disapprove of our Prime Minister Jean Chretien's handling of issues related to the terrorist attacks that took place in the US last week? (Would that be strongly or somewhat?)
