Some people say that requiring Americans and Canadians alike to have an official passport to re-enter the United States from Canada is a good and necessary measure to protect against terrorists and others from slipping into the United States. Other people say that requiring Americans and Canadians alike to have an official passport to re-enter the United States from Canada is a bad idea because it will reduce tourism between the countries, create a hassle for citizens and others, and another simpler method, like an identification card, should be found as an answer. Which is closer to your own point of view?

As you may know, Canada, the United States and Mexico entered into the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) in 1992 to reduce trade barriers and allow for a North American trading zone for the greater flow of goods and services between these countries. This agreement came into force in 1994. Thinking over the past few years, do you think that, on the whole, Canada/ The United States has been a winner or a loser as a result of this trade agreement?
