MEDIA GOVERNMENT COALITION

1. As you may know, under a signed agreement, the leaders of the Federal opposition Liberals, NDP and Bloc Quebecois have formed a Coalition to govern Canada that would last for the next 18 Months and possibly until June, 2011. In the new 24 member Cabinet, the Liberals would have 18 seats, the NDP would have six and the Bloc would have none. The coalition intends, shortly, to defeat the ruling minority Conservatives under Stephen Harper in Parliament and then tell the Governor General that together they can form the new government, all of which is legal and doable under our Constitution. Under the agreement Liberal Leader Stephane Dion will serve as interim Prime Minister until a new Liberal Leader is chosen and automatically becomes Prime Minister on May 9, 2009 at a Liberal Convention. Based on what you have seen, read or heard, do you support or oppose this three party coalition arrangement replacing the current Conservative government?

5. One option the Conservatives have is to unilaterally end this session of Parliament now and hold off any votes of confidence until a later date, perhaps later in January, when they're planning to put forward a 5. new budget. This would mean that the coalition would have to wait until a new Throne Speech in the New Year to defeat the Conservatives and form the government. 6. Some people say that regardless of how we got here, Stephen Harper and the Conservatives should fight and do everything they can legally to continue governing because of the severe economic situation the country faces and the fact the Liberals and the NDP have entered into an "unholy" deal with the Bloc Separatists. Other people say that regardless of how we got here, it is proper that a smooth transition of power to the Coalition take place if it is apparent the government will be defeated and that the economic policies brought forward by the Coalition, and the agreement of support and stability from the separatist Bloc Quebecois, will be good for the country. Which is closer to your own point of view?
