Nobody's Unpredictable

Methodology

- These are some of the findings of an Ipsos Reid poll conducted between August 14 and 18, 2009 on behalf of Global Television. For this survey, a sample of 442 adults living in Calgary from Ipsos' Canadian online panel was interviewed online.
- Weighting was then employed to balance demographics and ensure that the sample's composition reflects that of the adult population according to Census data and to provide results intended to approximate the sample universe.
- A survey with an unweighted probability sample of this size and a 100% response rate would have an estimated margin of error of +/-4.7 percentage points, 19 times out of 20, of what the results would have been had the entire population of this city or region been polled. All sample surveys and polls may be subject to other sources of error, including, but not limited to coverage error, and measurement error.
- The national "Canadian" results are not representative of the overall Canadian population as the poll was limited to urban centres, with the exception of Newfoundland and Labrador. As such, these results should not be used to generalize to a Canadian population average, but rather as a barometer of attitudes within Canadian cities.
