3. As you may know, three years ago, William Elliott was appointed Commissioner of the RCMP -- the first-ever civilian to lead the force. Some people say the Prime Minister was wrong to make this appointment because the new Commissioner should have come, as they always have, from within the RCMP with direct policing experience, and that they'd more likely have the support of senior management and rank and file officers in general. Other people say the Prime Minister was right in making this appointment because a non-police officer, civilian outsider, will see things in a fresh light and bring greater accountability and good management practices to the force, regardless of the internal RCMP support he gets. Based on what you have seen, read or heard about the RCMP, in hindsight, do you think that the appointment of William Elliott as commissioner was the right decision or the wrong decision?

5. As you may know, at least seven senior officials in the RCMP are speaking out against Commissioner Elliott and are asking Prime Minister Harper to replace him as head of the RCMP. Commissioner Elliott, a civilian, was personally appointed by the Prime Minister to clean up and reform the RCMP. Some people say that the Prime Minister should listen to these officers and remove Commissioner Elliot because they know best what type of leadership and change will work at the RCMP. Others have argued that the officers are objecting to Commissioner Elliott because he's leading the type of change the RCMP needs, and they'd rather keep things as they are. Which statement is closest to your view?
