Parliament Resumes to Same-Old Story

As Canadians Watch Showdown Over Gun Registry,
Conservatives (35%) Continue to Lead Liberals (29%),
NDP Caught in Squeeze on Gun Registry and
Sink (12%) to Tie with Greens (12%)

Public Release Date: Saturday, September 25, 6:00 AM EDT

Ipsos Reid is Canada's market intelligence leader and the country's leading provider of public opinion research. With operations in eight cities, Ipsos Reid employs more than 300 research professionals and support staff in Canada. The company has the biggest network of telephone call centres in Canada, as well as the largest pre-recruited household and on-line panels. Ipsos Reid's Canadian marketing research and public affairs practices are staffed with seasoned research consultants with extensive industry-specific backgrounds, offering the premier suite of research vehicles in Canada—including the Ipsos Trend Report, the leading source of public opinion in the country—all of which provide clients with actionable and relevant information. Ipsos Reid is an Ipsos company, a leading global survey-based market research group. To learn more, visit www.ipsos.ca

For copies of other news releases, please visit http://www.ipsos-na.com/news/

Parliament Resumes to Same-Old Story

As Canadians Watch Showdown Over Gun Registry,
Conservatives (35%) Continue to Lead Liberals (29%),
NDP Caught in Squeeze on Gun Registry and
Sink (12%) to Tie with Greens (12%)

Toronto, ON - The House of Commons has resumed and Parliamentarians appear to be picking up where they left off, with a fractious and narrow vote over the long-gun registry paving the way for another tumultuous session of Parliament. According to a new Ipsos Reid poll conducted on behalf of Postmedia News and Global Television, despite losing the long-gun registry vote this week, the Conservatives have managed to solidify their support, increasing their lead to six points over the Liberals.

If an election were held tomorrow, the Conservative Party under Prime Minister Stephen Harper would receive 35% of the vote among decided voters, (up 1 point), while the Liberal Party led by Michael Ignatieff would receive 29% of the vote (down 2 points). Since the start of the summer, Michael Ignatieff had been steadily improving his party's fortunes in the polls, but in a week where the Minister of Finance warned of an opposition coalition that could ruin the economy, the Liberals appear to have lost some ground, particularly in Ontario.

The electoral fortunes for the NDP have also worsened, perhaps as a result of the rifts caused within the Party evidenced by some MPs breaking from the Party line on the gun-registry vote. The NDP and Jack Layton would receive only 12% of the vote if an election were held tomorrow (down 4 points), which now ties them with Elizabeth May and the Green Party who are also at 12% support (up 3 points). Six percent (6%) of Canadians remain undecided.

The seat-rich province of Ontario continues to be a key battle ground. The Tories (37%) and the Grits (37%) are currently tied for support, erasing the lead the Liberals enjoyed mere weeks ago. The Green Party (15%) leads the NDP (11%) in Ontario.

In Quebec, the Bloc (44%) continues to enjoy a commanding lead over the Liberals (22%), and the Conservatives (16%). Once again, the Green Party (11%) leads the NDP (7%).

These are the findings of an Ipsos Reid poll conducted on behalf of Postmedia News and Global Television from September 21-23, 2010. For the survey, a representative randomly-selected sample of 1,002 adult Canadians was interviewed by telephone. With a sample of this size, the results are considered accurate to within ± 3.1 percentage points, 19 times out of 20, of what they would have been had the entire adult population of Canada been polled. The margin of error will be larger within regions and for other sub-groupings of the survey population. These data were weighted to ensure that the sample's regional and age/sex composition reflects that of the actual Canadian population according to Census data. All sample surveys and polls may be subject to other sources of error, including, but not limited to coverage error, and measurement error.

For more information on this news release, please contact:

John Wright Senior Vice President Ipsos Reid Public Affairs (416) 324-2002

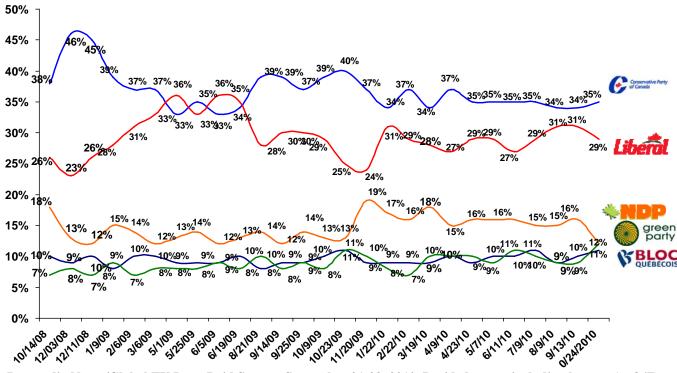

For full tabular results, please visit our website at www.ipsos.ca. News Releases are available at: http://www.ipsos-na.com/news/

© Ipsos Reid

Federal Vote Support

September 24, 2010, percentage of decided voters.

Postmedia News /Global TV Ipsos Reid Survey, September 21-23, 2010. Decided voters including leaners (n=867).

6% of all Canadian adults (n=1,002) are undecided