(Canada will compromise too much power over decisions about immigration, privacy and security to get a perimeter security agreement) Prime Minister Stephen Harper and U.S. President Barack Obama have announced a plan to negotiate a new 'perimeter security' agreement. Prime Minister Harper says Canadian sovereignty will not be jeopardized by an agreement and the intention is to improve cooperation on security matters so that cross-border traffic can move more quickly. But critics say that some aspects of Canada's sovereignty such as decisions about immigration, security and privacy could be traded away as part of the talks. Thinking about Canada's perimeter security, to what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements?

2. One of the proposals being negotiated is an 'entry-exit' system which tracks cross-border traffic. Under this system, it is possible that when a Canadians enters the U.S., the Canadian government would be informed of your movement across the border. Similarly, when someone crosses the border into Canadian territory, the U.S. government would be made aware of this movement. Do you think this is an acceptable measure to enhance border security, or do you think this is an unacceptable invasion of privacy:

3. Some commentators say Canada should push for creating an integrated North American Community where there would be an assembly of elected representatives from Canada, the United States and Mexico. The proposed community would enhance trade and cooperation in areas such as military, health threats, the environment and poverty reduction. Do you strongly approve, somewhat approve, somewhat disapprove, or strongly disapprove of Canada negotiating an agreement like this with the United States and Mexico?
